Communication with Cedar Tree (Tengorn)

11 to 18 November

Background

This is a follow to the dialogue from 4 – 11 November, with a Cedar tree in Priory Park, Malvern, Worcs.

Cedar Tree - Tengorn

Although I am sitting at home, I imagine myself stood next to 'Tengorn'; asking him whether he would be willing to share more with me today. I am aware of his immense power and a deep sense of joy and upliftment that touches me emotionally and through my physical senses. What he conveys seem to flow through images and words.

In response to a forum request from Joanna Dziekan (Alef student) I first questioned him about his name, what does it mean?

Tengorn

"My name is a vibration that reflects my essence within the structure of this physical form. As small saplings, we are not aware of specific names only a sense of what we are and how we are experiencing. But in growing into maturity and through communication with other tree beings, we gain insight into our vibrational nature, and it is this that I have tried to express to you in a way that you can recognise."

I then asked him how was it that he could understand me when much of my thought is held within the English language. His response is illuminating.

Tengorn

"There are two answers to this question. Firstly, behind every word that you express there is a thought, and at a fairly early stage of my development, indeed within many trees, we learn how to discern the thought intent of other spiritual essences and also the thoughts of those beings that have a physical form such as yourself and also our flying friends." (I presumed he meant birds).

"Secondly, through long association with people in the space that I reside, we have learnt how to read the thoughts of human minds. You once allowed me full access into your mind and consciousness, and from there I was able to gather and add to my previous knowledge. This is important for others who might learn from your experience because there does not need to be any limitation on how an individual might choose to want to communicate with us.”

I then asked him to relay more on his role within the park and the wider landscape.

Tengorn

“Of all species human beings have the greatest degree of physical freedom to move across our world through different means. You also can explore aspects of your mind that penetrate the physical world through your mental studies. Yet of all species it seems to us that you are the most disconnected from your true inner essence. We are limited once we develop from moving from place to place, yet we have access to many levels of consciousness of which you are totally unaware. For all your cleverness you have not yet learned how to live in harmony with each other and with other species on our planet.

Trees provide an environment that supports life on the Earth. Not only do we assist in the balancing of the atmosphere, but we also help channel ‘higher’ levels of consciousness onto and into the planet. It is hard for me to convey what this means in a way that can be easily understood by minds that are mainly locked into themselves. Perhaps the best way to do this would be to consider that we can access ‘higher-beings’ of light, such as some of your past spiritual teachers, and channel their energies through ourselves and into the grid-network that encircles the Earth. This helps raise the vibratory rate of the Earth and is part of a feed-back loop, that is an aspect of the Earth’s evolution.

Also, we do what we can to cleanse and transform the worst aspects of the mental pollution that stems from the ‘dark’ destructive aspects of human consciousness. This work is made much harder in those areas devoid of trees. For my part, I contribute to the balancing of energies in the area where I reside, coming under the guidance of those spiritual beings that permeate this locality. They request our co-operation in accessing specific vibrational energies, and we do what we can to understand and work with them. I am also willing to share my knowledge, and healing energy with those beings that wish to communicate with me, such as we are doing now.”

I am aware of immense power as I ‘listen’ to these words, although listening is not really the right word because it is not hearing through my physical ears or even hearing precise words but a mixture of knowingness, awareness and a kaleidoscope of images and thoughts that I experience within my mind. I ask Tengorn whether others can learn to communicate with trees and what is the best steps to take. I mention that I am in dialogue with other people who are trying to build this bridge in tree consciousness.

Tengorn

“Some of those that you are in communication with us have already made a connection to a specific tree. To those individuals, I would suggest that you learn to still your minds and then open yourself to what the tree is willing to communicate by asking it questions on its life and experiences, just as you might between yourselves. For the most part, trees are self-sustaining, but they do appreciate being acknowledged as beings in their own right and sent thoughts of love and appreciation for the work that they do for the Earth and all life forms living here. Once the connection has been made to a specific tree, a form of friendship can be developed. We are interested in your species for obvious reasons. By allowing us access into your minds we learn something of what it is to be a human being and from there how best we might assist you.

For those who have not yet begun to build such a bridge, we would suggest that you find a mature tree in the area where you live and then start to build a connection with it. We are used to communicating telepathically with tree beings in different parts of the globe, so it does not matter whether you are stood next to us or far distant, for once communication has been established, we can always link through to your minds, wherever you are located. For the most part, we are always willing to share with you and to offer supportive healing energies that might assist you in your life. We are all unique and individual, and each species of tree carries a slightly different range of qualities. This is why, in our spiritual journey, like you, we also have several life experiences, through different tree species.”

As Tengorn was conveying this message, I had the feeling of being able to access the essence of the different vibrations that stem from plants and trees, simply by thinking of them. I thanked Tengorn for what he had shared with me on this occasion, feeling humbled and deeply touched by his willingness to communicate.

Critique and Assessment

The communication with Tengorn flowed in a very easy way. In response to any question, I posed the reply was immediate with a flow of thought that I have tried to convey accurately. I cannot be sure whether my mind was interpreting the information exchange or whether I have simply relayed what Tengorn was conveying. On reflecting further on this area of research, I resolved that I would not do any internet searches on tree communications, or read any books on the subject until after completing the Integrative practices sessions next year. I will then be able to compare my results with others to see whether there are any common threads.
